

I wish to register my preference for the FCC to retain current ownership rules. Regardless of the advent of satellite news, cable news, online news, etc. --- not EVERYONE has cable or online news service (if they have even have a computer! Your own CDTAC committee is proof that you recognize there are underserved populations that do not have access to online computer service, due to lack of telephone landlines. In addition, the very essence of democracy requires listening to the voices of all. (Read the works of John Mill!) It only takes watching FOX news to understand how quickly, and how far, the bar of the fairness doctrine in news can fall when news is shaped by corporate ownership. Ownership by conglomerates, without restraint on number or type, will inevitably leave doubt as to the absolute unbiased quality that ALL news should offer to our public citizens. Please do not remove this important safeguard.
